Dear amigos, amies, and friends,

Perhaps in no field more so than in language teaching has the age-old adage “A picture paints a thousand words” been quite so true. By making use of images, language teachers can convey far more meaning to students than with words alone. For this reason, a good clip art collection can be a language teacher’s best friend.

As a fellow language educator, I have been frustrated over the years by the lack of clip art appropriate for use in my teaching. While wonderful commercial software programs and clipart websites abound, there are few resources available that cater to our very specific needs as teachers of languages. I began to draw my own images to reflect what I was teaching in the classroom.

In this collection, you will find drawings reflecting some of the traditional topics, such as animals, travel and sports. But also included are images reflecting some of the more challenging topics to find, such as “subject pronouns”, “verbs” and culturally-specific clip art.

It is my hope that these images will both delight your students and facilitate their learning of whatever language they are studying.
